BY-LAW NUMBER 12-93

King's Ward Park, Paris, Ontario

Historical

Hiram Capron, the founder of Paris, was known as "King" Capron, hence the name King's Park also known as King's Ward Park. Hiram Capron, in his foresight, left to us this lovely spot and it is a fitting reminder of his largess.

In the Town's beginning, circa 1830, Capron had plans in place for what was later known as King's Park that was to be used as a centre for business and community affairs. Records indicate that in the 1850's the Park hosted a market building. Since local merchants were more interested in locating along the banks of the Grand River, King's Park gradually became transformed into an idyllic setting much as it is today. In earlier days, Parisians were entertained with rousing music from the long since departed bandshell which in those days was manned through the efforts of area musicians.

It is one of the few remaining landmarks bearing a personal touch of the Capron era. It is a fitting monument to be retained through designation in its current unblemished state to the man who built Paris, Hiram "King" Capron.
